

Annual Report on transparency in decision-making process for 2009

In 2009, the Agency proposed for public consultations 14 draft decisions deemed to exercise significant economic and social impact on the electronic communications market. This process covered various active forms of consultation such as public hearings and debates, working meetings and public sessions of the Agency Board to approve these projects.

The main tool used in the public consultation process was the official website of the Agency. Every draft document subject to consultation was displayed on page, being supplemented by an informative text with a summary of its contents, the arguments to justify the need of adopting the document, data on accompanying materials, the duration of the consultation, the deadline for and manner of submitting comments and recommendations. The website also provided information on public sessions and hearings, summaries of recommendations from providers, as well as results of consultations and final approval by Administrative Board.

As a result of public consultations on the mentioned 14 the Agency received a total of 313 recommendations, of which 238 were considered well-grounded and served as basis for further modification and completion of the Administrative Board Decisions.
